White Fox Squirrel

The state house at Topeka, Kan., has a phenomenon which probably no other similar organization can boast of. It is a white fox squirrel, and was shot by a farmer near Ozarkia recently. The animal is unusually large for a fox squirrel. Its back is entirely white. Its head is of the same color, save a small spot of brown between the ears and over the nose. The tail and under part of the body are brown, like an ordinary squirrel. Students of nature say that this is the only white fox squirrel which they have ever heard of and may be the only one in existence.
